

Young Soldier Shows Death Only Limit To Courage

(EDITOR'S NOTE—In Viet Nam, raw courage has become as much a part of the battlefield as bullets. The following accounts from correspondents in South Viet Nam relate two examples of the kind of courage displayed by young Americans in war in 1966.)

By PETER ARNETT

Saigon (AP)—A young infantryman named Stephen Laier has shown in 15 pain-filled days that in some men the only limit to courage is death.

The courage of Spec. 4 Laier, 18 years old, six feet tall and 225 pounds, almost defies comprehension by men who have never been wounded in battle.

From the moment he lost both his legs to a bursting Viet Cong mine early in February, to the time 15 days later when he finally ebbed from his body, Laier fought for survival with a tenacity that brought tears to the eyes of those who knew that his wounds were mortal. The doctors did everything to save him.

Big, blond Laier, from Fort Wayne, Ind., had shown he was a man well worth saving.

He suffered his terrible wounds Feb. 4 as an ambush patrol from his company from the 1st Battalion, 16th Regiment, 1st division, chased a sniper and got hit with hidden mines wired to detonate simultaneously.

Three Killed Instantly

Three of the men were killed instantly, the remaining

11 wounded. Laier, close by the mines when they burst, lost his legs in what doctors term "a traumatic amputation."

With wounds this terrible, most men slip into shock and die.

Laier, the radio man for the patrol, was made of sterner stuff. He told doctors later he knew he was the only man alive capable of operating his radio equipment.

He tied rough tourniquets around the stumps of his legs and groped for his radio in the undergrowth under some wild rubber trees. The blast had upset the calibration of his radio.

Returned The Set

In the gathering dusk, Laier returned the set, a difficult job for a whole man. Then he began calling to his company headquarters at nearby Lai Khe to notify them of the catastrophe that had befallen the squad.

Laier then attempted to call down medical helicopters, but they could not land because of the darkness. A patrol from his company arrived on foot, guided by Laier.

By this time 35 minutes had gone by.

His company commander, Capt. Edward Yaugo, from Warren, Ohio, asked Laier, "Is there anything we can do for you?"

Laier replied, "Yes, you can get me some morphine." The fight for Laier's life was on.

Dr. Kris Keggi, from El Paso, Tex., remembers Laier being brought into the 3rd Surgical Hospital at Bien Hoa that night.

"Medically, he was dead then," Keggi said. "We probed his veins. There was no blood in them. He was literally down to his last drop of blood."

Keggi and his aides pumped six pints of blood into the youth and he came around.

Fifteen days later a total of 60 pints of blood had been given him, literally replacing his normal blood supply six times.

Most men die after transfusions of 20 pints of blood. Too many complications set in. But after 30 pints, doctors thought Laier might have a chance.

Will Was Tremendous

"His will to live was tremendous," Dr. Keggi said. Laier did eventually develop a multiplicity of complications, necessitating further operations on his legs.

"We fought against amputating his legs at the hips," Keggi said. "We hated to do that. This man had been a football player, and he told us that he wanted to get out, wear tin legs, and walk again."

At no time did Laier complain about his misfortune. "Maybe it was because his grandfather had lost his legs because of diabetes. He didn't seem afraid to face life," said Capt. Marguerite Groux, from Malone, N.Y., the operating room nurse.

Sent Letters Home

Nurse Groux helped Laier write letters home, to his mother and his girl friend.

"He was so brave, that he didn't even want to tell his girl friend that he was so sick. He said she should not have to worry about him," nurse Groux said.

To help sustain him in his quiet, desperate fight for life, Laier, a Roman Catholic, asked for a priest. As many as five Catholic chaplains at a time came to visit him. Nurse Groux said he prayed constantly.

Medical Specialist Jose Mares, from Albuquerque, N.M., remembers Laier as a funster.

"He kept telling us he really wanted to be a barber, not a soldier. Then he said he wanted to sit by a lake and fish his life away," Mares said.

Raised Hopes of Doctors

With this kind of spirit, Laier raised hopes of the doctors that somehow he would pull through. But as the extent of his medical complications became apparent, this hope began to fade.

Laier's commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Jonathan Seaman, visited Laier several times. Seaman was so impressed with the young radio man that he wrote a friend, "this is one of the bravest men I have seen in 30 years as a soldier."

Seaman presented Laier a Bronze Star with "V" for valor, and told him: "This is the highest award in my power to present you. I wish I could present you with a higher one."

Spirit Never Falters

Laier told his commanding general: "I want to stay in the army when I get my new legs."

Laier's spirit never faltered. It was his body that failed him.

In an epitaph to the young radioman, Gen. Seaman said, "With men like Laier, our division, our army, our country will always be great."

Death did not come as a merciful blessing for the terribly wounded infantryman. He tried hard not to die.

RFK COALITION ATTACKED

...By Vice President

Wellington, New Zealand (AP)—U.S. Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey said Monday that Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's proposal for a coalition government in South Viet Nam including communist and anti-communist elements would amount to putting a fox in a chicken coop.

There would not be many chickens left, Humphrey said. He spoke at a news conference ending a brief but hectic stay in the New Zealand capital.

On his arrival here Sunday the vice president encountered his second rough anti-Viet Nam war demonstration in as many days. His car was rushed by a sign-swinging demonstrator who was hurled back by police.

Holyoake Talks

But Sunday, when Humphrey drove to Parliament House to confer with Prime Minister Keith J. Holyoake and the cabinet, there was only a handful of demonstrators, standing silently with signs denouncing the war.

Humphrey was unhurt in the Sunday incident. But he appeared a bit shaken as he left the car, stalled by the excited driver in the driveway of the U.S. embassy.

Humphrey had dismissed the Kennedy proposal at one news conference Sunday, but reporters raised it with him again Sunday.

The vice president said history demonstrates that when fascists or communists are included in a coalition government there is either paralysis or takeover.

Analogy Used

He then used the fox and chicken coop analogy and suggested, too, it would be like having an arsonist in the fire department.

The vice president declared that the U.S. purpose is not to impose on South Viet Nam those very forces trying to destroy it.

"I do not believe in writing a prescription for the ills of South Viet Nam that includes a dose of arsenic," the vice president said.

Holyoake said he agreed with Humphrey and the U.S. government on this.

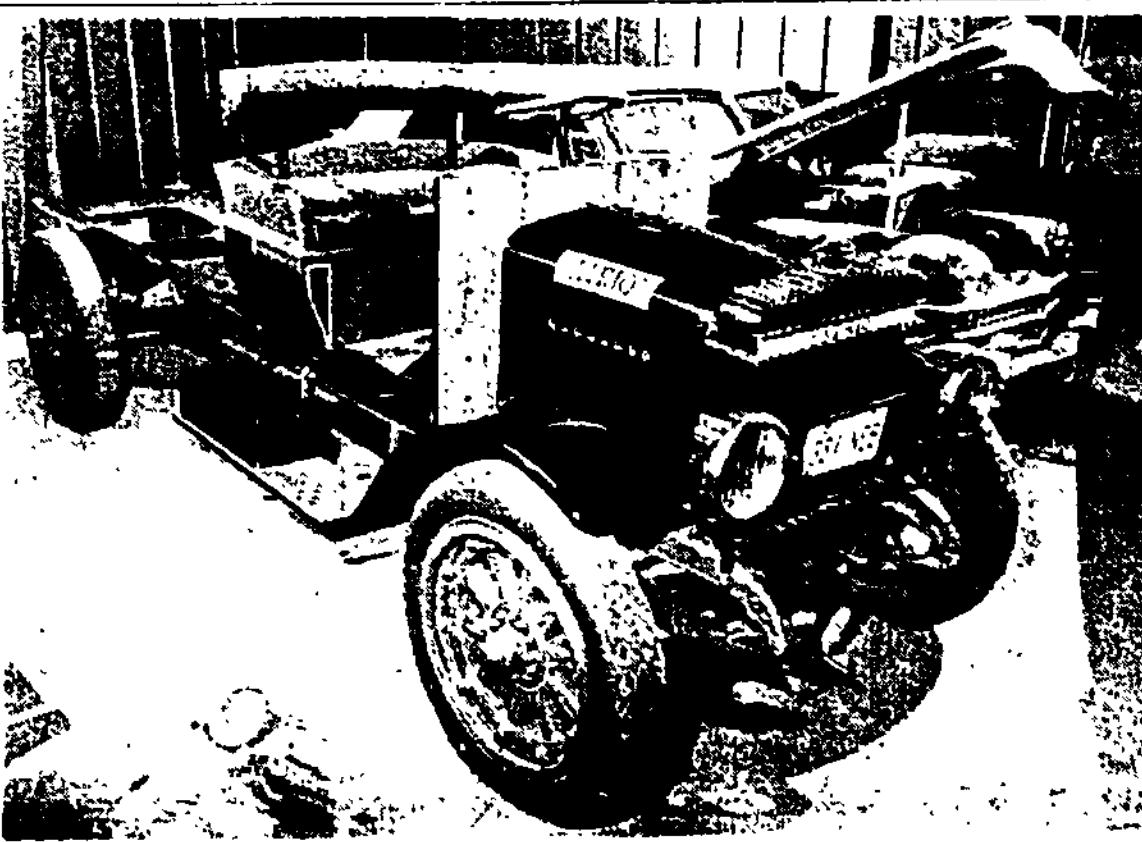

Humphrey recovered quickly after the driveway incident and stopped to shake hands with well-wishers before entering the embassy under an aide's umbrella protecting him from a downpour.

The youth who charged the car was sent reeling with the sign draped about his neck. It read in scarlet letters: "Dirty Washing."

"Don't bring your dirty washing down under, Mr. Humphrey."

He was in a knot of sign-carrying "Go home Hubert, the New Zealand people oppose your war," and "United States diplomacy is bombs and bribes" opponents of the Viet Nam war standing at the entrance of the embassy residence as the vice president ended a 90 mile drive from O'hakea Air Force Base, where he landed after a flight from Canberra, Australia.

The demonstrators numbering about 25 — scuffled with police, who, according to an American observer, "flogged" them back.

Nebraska Auto Pioneers' Dream Sputtered, Died

By DICK BUDIG
Star Staff Writer

In 1908, the fragile, sputtering dream of an Angus, Neb., auto builder coughed to life, and was appropriately dubbed the Angus.

From then until 1926, hopeful Nebraska auto pioneers added their contribution to the stew which eventually became the American way of transportation.

Of some 2,200 makes of vehicles produced in the U.S. since 1877, nine were produced in Nebraska, according to Early American Automobiles and Motor History of America, two books by Floyd Clymer and C. B. Classcock, respectively, which were loaned to The Star by Lincoln antique auto collector Harold Rens.

Angus grabbed Nebraska's auto-producing spotlight the following year (1909) when the Angus Auto Co. unveiled the Fuller.

Center In Omaha

In 1911, Omaha took the center of the stage with the production of the Rogers. Omaha held stage-center for the next seven years with vehicles named the Omaha, 1913; the Drummond, 1915-16, and the Douglas, 1918-22.

Lincoln made a bid to upstage Omaha in 1918 with a truck called the Hebb.

If a prize were to be given for years of continuous production, it would go to Havelock, where, in what is now the location of the Goodyear Rubber Co., the Patriot-Revere truck was built from 1920-26.

The Jonz, built in Beatrice, belongs somewhere in the list, but its debut date is not listed.

Although slogans for Nebraska vehicles were not given in the books, those noted for other early vintage gas-guzzlers are chuckle-worthy.

"Wonderful Power, the King of the Hill Climbers," boasted the Allen, a product of Allen Motor Co., Fostoria, Ohio, in 1920-23.

The prospective buyer of a Sheridan, whose slogan in 1921 was "The Car Complete," might wonder what was missing on other autos.

The Cartecar's slogan, "No Clutch to Slip, No Gears to Strip," may have masked a tongue-in-cheek barb aimed at driving proficiency of the individual.

If speed is king today, its implication must have been important in 1920. The Martin auto lunged its hopes on "The Little Brother of the Aeroplane."

On The Ground

The Pope-Toledo kept things on the ground, but bannered "The Quiet, Mile-a-Minute Car" as its allusion to speed.

The search for speed and its eventual conquest may have signaled the end for the army auto and truck builders, including Nebraska's nine firms.

The search for speed cost money, and the story of the big getting bigger replayed itself.

But before dismissing Nebraska auto pioneers with a pat story about bigness, one must also consider public opinion, which in the early days was definitely not on the side of the motorized carriage builder or owner.

At least the opinion of many farmers, who in that day held a majority in Nebraska.

The Clymer books do not specify which state, but at one time, the book says, Public opinion was so against the automobile that it tried, unsuccessfully, to pass a law which would have forced motorists to stop every 10 minutes and shoot off Roman candles.

Official View Cold To Kennedy's Idea

Washington (AP)—Two administration officials and a Republican senator took a cold view today of a suggestion by Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., that a coalition government in Saigon might be necessary to end the Viet Nam war.

McGeorge Bundy, special assistant to President Johnson for security affairs, Undersecretary of State George Ball and Sen. George Aiken, R-Vt., expressed disapproval in varying ways on separate television-radio interview programs.

Kennedy told a news conference Saturday that the alternative to killing off all the Viet Cong is to bring its political arm, the National Liberation Front, to the bargaining table. He said to "admit them to a share of power and responsibility is at the heart of a negotiated settlement."

Kennedy Friend

Bundy, a close Kennedy friend, said on the NBC program "Meet the Press" that he did not wish to comment directly on the New York senator's proposal, but added:

"I can say that the administration does not take the view that admitting the communists to a share of the power and responsibility would be a useful or helpful step . . .

one that would really lead to peace.

"I think our view is rather that what is needed is a sufficient degree of peace in that country and of absence of subversion and terror so there can be reasonable expression of the political feeling of the people in Viet Nam."

'Abide By Result'

"We are in favor of that. We are prepared to abide by the result."

Speaking on ABC's "Issues and Answers," Ball said Kennedy's proposal is "not a thoroughly new idea and doesn't seem to us to be an acceptable solution."

"What they want from us is to recognize the Front as the sole government of the South Vietnamese," Ball said. "They won't even think of negotiating unless we accept this premise."

"Our own feeling is if we accede to the idea of a coalition government, we would have to exclude all the representatives of the South Vietnamese government. That's what the North Vietnamese want."

Committee Member

Aiken, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee which has been holding hearings on the Viet Nam war, said he had not studied Kennedy's proposal, although he had read about it. Speaking on CBS "Face the Nation" Aiken said:

"It is not my opinion that it's up to the United States to offer the Viet Cong a share in the Saigon government."

"Gen. (Maxwell) Taylor told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that we want nothing there but the right of the South Vietnamese people to settle their own affairs in their own way. Therefore, unless our policy has changed, I would say that Sen. Kennedy's proposal is considerably out of order."

Phoenix Guard Unit 'Bombs' City With Rifle Shell

Phoenix, Ariz. (AP)—An Arizona National Guard gun crew accidentally fired what it believed to be a disarmed 106MM recoilless rifle shell through three buildings in downtown Phoenix Sunday.

An unidentified woman suffered minor injuries.

The shell, taken from a casing marked "inert," was fired from a gun mounted atop a half-ton truck and passed through a class room of a school, a frame garage, a fence around the Capitol Methodist Church and one wall of the church.

Backblast from the weapon caused minor damage, including broken windows, in several homes in a two-block, heavily-populated area.

FLEET ADM. NIMITZ DIES

San Francisco (AP)—Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, who commanded the most powerful fleet the world has ever known in driving the Japanese navy from the Pacific Ocean in World War II, died Sunday at his home on Yerba Buena Island.

A Navy spokesman said Nimitz, 80, died "of complications following a stroke."

He was the last of the five-star admirals.

Nimitz suffered a cerebral hemorrhage on Jan. 3 and was hospitalized at Oak Knoll Naval Hospital in Oakland for about two weeks.

President Johnson at that time sent a telegram to Nimitz praising the old naval warrior for his "indomitable spirit that gave us hope 20 years ago."

Nimitz underwent surgery on his back on Nov. 9, 1964. He had returned to the naval hospital for a checkup when he suffered the stroke.

He was jumped over 24 senior admirals to become commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet after the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, turned it into a shambles.

Nimitz arrived in Pearl Harbor Christmas Day. He ran his flag up on a submarine and took command Dec. 31, 1941.

As soon as he could assemble a fighting fleet, Nimitz turned to the attack. It began in the Coral Sea May 4-8, 1942, in the first great air-sea battle.

Then, in a calculated risk, Nimitz concentrated his fleet off Midway, and met the Japanese in a decisive three-day air-sea battle, June 3-6.

Four Japanese carriers and a heavy cruiser were sunk. The United States lost the carrier Yorktown and a destroyer. It was the turning point of the Pacific war.

"It just became a question of time," Nimitz said later. After the war Nimitz became chief of naval operations on Dec. 15, 1945, and demobilized all but a fraction of the most powerful navy in history, which he had helped build.

Nimitz was decorated by 14 nations and received honorary degrees from 19 universities.

He became a fleet admiral Dec. 19, 1944, five days after Congress created the rank. A fleet admiral never retires.

Since Jan. 1, 1948 he has been a special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy in the western sea frontier.

Nimitz was born Feb. 24, 1885 in Fredericksburg, Tex., about 15 miles from President Johnson's Texas ranch.

He and his wife—they were married on April 9, 1913—resided on Yerba Buena Island.

They have a son, Rear Adm. Chester W. Nimitz Jr., retired, of New Canaan, Conn.; and three daughters—Catherine, wife of Navy Capt. James T. Lay, of Newport, R.I.; Anne Elizabeth Nimitz of Topanga, Calif.; and Sister Mary Manson Aquinas of the Dominican Convent, San Rafael, Calif.

'Old Dan' Saves Platoon Buddies

By JOHN T. WHEELER

Cu Chi, Viet Nam (AP)—"When he spotted the grenade, he lunged on top of it without hesitation. He hollered, 'move out, you people,' and then it went off."

Spec. 4 James McKeown of Willingboro, N.J., was talking about Spec. 4 Daniel Fernandez of Sunray, Tex., whose ultimate act of bravery saved the lives of four of his buddies. But the blast of the Viet Cong grenade ended the life of Dan Fernandez, 21.

Last Friday, Fernandez was in a reinforced squad lying in ambush outside the 25th Division's 2nd Brigade perimeter, 25 miles west of Saigon. The Americans were hit by a much larger Viet Cong force using a 50-caliber machine gun, a light machine gun, automatic weapons and plenty of grenades.

Hit On Foot

"The grenade hit Dan on the foot as he was crawling," McKeown said Sunday. "When it went off, it tore into his groin, abdomen and right leg."

Pvt. David R. Maslingale of Fresno, Calif., a medic, told Fernandez while they were waiting for a medical evacuation helicopter, "hang on, buddy."

Fernandez replied, "I'm going to hang on." But he added: "I never believed it would hurt so much."

Just before the helicopter took off, Fernandez asked Sgt. Ruben Perkins of Nashville, Tenn., "Who's going to take care of you now?"

Grown Up

"We had been working together ever since we joined the unit," Perkins said. "He called me 'Sergeant Rock' and I called him 'Old Dan.' He was real young, but real grown up in his attitude."

Platoon buddies of Fernandez said he was a friend to everyone, generous with his money when others had run out, a likeable guy.

Fernandez, whose father, Jose, lives at Los Lunas, N.M., already had served one stint in Viet Nam, a 90-day volunteer tour as a door gunner on armed helicopters. He earned the Air Medal and a Purple Heart during that tour. He returned to Viet Nam last month with the 1st Platoon, C Company of the 5th Mechanized Infantry's 1st Battalion.

Volunteering

He was still volunteering. "He was in the same spot the night before and volunteered to go out on patrol again even though he hadn't had any sleep for 48 hours," 2nd Lt. Joseph D'Orso of Norwalk, Conn., said. "He was always volunteering."

Maslingale, one of those saved by Fernandez' lunge atop the grenade, said his friend "had a girl back home he planned to marry when he got back. He also wanted to get a new truck for his father's ranch."

One member of the platoon said: "After it happened, I asked somebody 'Who was his closest friend?'"

Supplying his own answer, the soldier added: "Everyone was."

Platoon Wreath

Members of the platoon chipped in $40 for a wreath for Fernandez' funeral.

"He was one of the best men in the platoon," Lt. D'Orso said. "He was ready to do anything. And he was always cheerful, even when he came out of a swamp with leeches on him."

Dan Fernandez was hit by a rifle bullet after the grenade exploded. He lived to get back to the brigade hospital. Doctors fought for two hours to save him, but the internal bleeding was heavy.

The Viet Cong paid a price, too. Seventeen of them were killed and five others were believed killed and carried away by comrades.

Dan Fernandez' officers are recommending him for the Congressional Medal of Honor.

NU Farm Engineering Staff Deals With Future Methods

By MYRNA TEGMEIER
EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was written by an editorial assistant at the department of Information, University of Nebraska.

The farmer sat in his air-conditioned den and pushed a control button. The driverless tractor in the field turned a corner.

Impossible? Perhaps so. In the near future, impossible? No. One of the many research projects being developed by the University of Nebraska Department of Agricultural Engineering is a remote control tractor.

Crops may be planted differently in the future, too. Experimentation with seeds affixed to a strip of paper tape is being considered.

Research projects such as the ones cited are but one aspect of the NU agricultural engineering department, which has undergone great change since it was established in 1908.

Separate Units
When the University was subdivided into colleges in 1909, agriculture and engineering were made into separate units. Prior to this time, the Regents had authorized a Farm Mechanics Building (1903).

The first instructor of farm mechanics was J. B. Davidson, who was appointed in 1905, to teach courses in farm machinery, farm motors, and forge work. According to Dr. John Davis, Dean of the NU College of Engineering and Architecture, Davidson is considered by many to be the "father of agricultural engineering." He was influential in his field "on a national level."

From 1905 to 1908, the department of farm mechanics was adjunct to the Mechanical Engineering Department. In 1908 it became a separate department in the Industrial College. This inter-college relationship has prospered for more than 50 years.

Two Courses
There are two related courses of study offered by the Department of Agricultural Engineering. They are representative of the bi-college road traveled by the department. Agricultural engineering, a major in the College of Engineering and Architecture, is "the profession that provides the engineering necessary for the development of agriculture." Mechanized agriculture is an age major designed primarily for students interested in farm operations or sales and service work.

In 1910, the department offered the first four-year course of study in agricultural engineering available in the United States. From that time until the present, NU staff members have been involved in diverse teaching, research, and extension projects.

Professor Kenneth Von Bergen is conducting a study on the scheduling of men and machinery in the handling of hay. Taking the weather into consideration, he is studying the harvest operation and hopes to determine the size and kind of equipment most efficient for the hay harvest. Stuart Nelson, department staff member with a joint USDA appointment, is experimenting with stored grain. In order to control insects and reduce damage in such grain, he has treated grain with radio frequency energy. He has also found that the germination of some seeds (sweet clover and spinach) is improved by these energy treatments.

Remote Control
One project which hints of farm changes in the future is the experimentation with remote control tractors. Electronic sensing equipment is used for control. This appears especially promising for repeat operations, such as laying irrigation ditches and feeding cattle.

When tilling fields, the soil is compacted by pushing on it. The breaking and turning must then be done. G. W. Steinbruegge of the Department of Agricultural Engineering is studying the tillage operation. He has set up machines which measure all energy used in the operation. As a result of the study, Steinbruegge hopes to learn a method of reducing the compaction and improving the efficiency of the tillage operation.

All efforts of the staff of the department are not used in research. There are approximately 120 students in the two options (ag engineering and mechanized ag) who demand attention, too.

Most of the boys majoring in mechanized ag are preparing for careers in business or in farming. Fifty per cent of the ag engineering graduates enter advanced study, and the remainder usually accept jobs with agriculture-related industries. "We could place three or four boys for every one we graduate," Davis said.

Perhaps the most famous aspect of the Department of Agricultural Engineering is the tractor testing program. Instituted in 1919 when the Nebraska Tractor Law became effective, the testing program is under the control of the Board of Tractor Testing Engineers and an engineer-in-charge of tractor testing.

Under the provisions of the existing law, all tractors over 10 horsepower which are sold in the state must be tested by the University of Nebraska Department of Agricultural Engineering.

Schools such as the University of Nebraska Department of Agricultural Engineering hold the key to providing for future progress and solving future problems.

According to the late Professor L. W. Hurlbut, former chairman of the NU department, agriculture and engineering have advanced hand-in-hand from primitive to modern methods within a span of 50 years. "Together they have blasted away the 'scarcity barrier' and made possible a high standard of living that is unequalled anywhere else in the world," he said.

NU Summary Sheet Results From Tractor Tests Ready

A new summary sheet including the results of the 1965 University of Nebraska tractor testing program is now available. The summary includes resumes of 141 tests conducted by the tractor testing laboratory.

Copies of the summary are available at county extension offices, the NU Department of Information, the Department of Agricultural Engineering, and the Tractor Testing Laboratory.

Single copies of complete individual reports on tractors tested may be obtained by writing to the Agricultural Station, Department of Agricultural Engineering, College of Agriculture and Home Economics, Lincoln, Nebraska, 68503. The name and model of the tractors should be specified.

The 1966 testing season will begin April 1. According to L. F. Larsen, engineer-in-charge at the laboratory, present plans indicate that about 30 tractors will be tested. Fifty-five tractors were tested in 1965.

Larsen anticipates that the 1966 tests will continue to show a trend begun last year—a greater percentage of both large (over 90 horsepower) and small (about 10 horsepower) tractors.

"Industries are showing a great deal of interest in the small tractor," he said.

Split CDC Endorses Gov. Brown

Bakersfield, Calif. (UPI)—The California Democratic Council endorsed Gov. Edmund G. Brown's bid for a third term Sunday, but some 200 delegates walked out while Brown asked for their support.

Unhappiness over the Democratic governor's support of a successful move Saturday to oust Council President Simon Casady, an opponent of the Viet Nam war, provoked the walkout.

But most of the more than 1,800 delegates to the annual meeting of the nation's largest volunteer political organization stayed and rocked the convention hall with cries of "we want Pat."

Brown got 874 votes for the endorsement.

Dr. Carleton Goodlett, a Negro and publisher of a San Francisco weekly newspaper, received 289 votes. Dale Alexander, a Hollywood writer and political unknown, got seven. Both are undeclared candidates.

It wasn't a complete victory for Brown. More than 700 of the delegates didn't vote, indicating a deep split in the

School Lunch

Pizza, juice, Potato chips, Carrot raisin salad or molded fruit salad in lettuce cup, Cherry snowflake cake, Milk

By Glenn Kreuscher, Farm Editor

Farmers and ranchers have a long reputation for being independent individuals, but along with this independence often comes a chaotic market and you find a lot of discussion in many farm meetings today as to what course future arrangements will take in food marketing.

The word integration in agriculture brings a fright that the man producing the food will have less to say about managerial functions and less opportunity for profit.

Many of those that fear integration of agriculture production point to the broiler industry where farmers consider the producer having very little chance to reap substantial profits.

Industry Pressured
This week Robert N. Hampton, director of marketing services for the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, told Nebraska Co-op officials:

"The pressures for standardization and for integration are overwhelming in the food industry today."

He said the objectives of vertical integration are threefold, (1) to assure a reliable, high quality source of supply; (2) to expand the base of profitable related operations, and (3) to gain market power and flexibility of marketing operations.

Hampton said that especially in profitable times the pressures for integration through merger or acquisition will remain great in food as in other industries.

"Consumers are the real key to modern pressures for integration," said Hampton.

Dependable Product
He said this comes when the housewife today wants to buy from the supermarket shelf a brand she can depend on.

The quality control necessary to assure uniformity in a product integration of different aspects of food production allows a more carefully supervised management of production, harvesting, processing, handling and merchandising.

The farmer or rancher when posed with this problem wants to know who will control and reap the profits from this type of operation.

Hampton said the failure of those in agriculture to fully accept the modern marketing concept that every process from the check-out counter to the seedbed should be geared to serve the needs and desires of the consumer has been a major reason why farmers have not yet seen fit to cooperate to a greater extent than has been done.

Continued Trend
"Since contract arrangements, and to an even greater degree, integration, offer great advantages in scheduling, quality control and successful merchandising, future trends in this direction will surely continue," said Hampton.

Hampton said the answer to the problem for agriculture still is best found in the farmer's cooperative.

"It provides a legally acceptable organization structure, avenues for capital accumulation, management subject to policy guidance or restraints by farmers and a business nucleus which can evolve into the kind of vertical coordination or integration which a given situation requires," said Hampton.

Have you ever wondered just what might happen next in agriculture?

Dairymen and other cattle owners may be able in the not too distant future to be able to order the sex of their calf crop.

Experiments are underway to separate male and female sperms for use in artificial insemination of cattle.

A German scientist has been 80% successful in preliminary experiments with a scientific discovery that developed accidentally.

While working in research the scientist noticed that female producing sperms sank to the bottom and that a method of separation of sperm by sedimentation is extremely simple to operate on a large scale.

The annual meeting of the Farmers Union of Nebraska begins Wednesday at the Nebraska Center. Two Washington speakers are scheduled for the two-day program with action on resolutions scheduled for Thursday.

Preventive War Seen If Israel Gets Bomb

Cairo (UPI) — President Gamal Abdel Nasser was quoted Sunday as saying that if Israel proceeds with production of an atomic bomb, "then I believe the only answer is preventive war."

Both the Middle East News Agency (MENA) and the Baghdad Press said Nasser made the statement in an interview given to Iraqi newsmen accompanying Iraqi President Abdul Salem Aref on a visit to Cairo last week.

In the interview, Nasser said that in such a war, the Arabs' immediate objective would be to wipe out "everything that enables Israel to produce an atomic bomb."

Growing Concern
Political observers in Cairo said Nasser's remarks reflected growing concern in the Mideast during the past year of a possible race to develop atomic weapons.

Official United States estimates indicate that Israel could produce an atomic bomb in less than two years, using the French-built "Dimona" reactor. They estimated it would take the U.S.A.R. a slightly longer time, using its smaller Soviet-built "Inchass" reactor.

Nasser was also quoted in the interview as saying:

"Must Do Same
"Israel is getting arms secretly, and we must do the same. We must not allow Israel to have the upper hand."

This was an apparent reference to French rocket assistance to Israel and a recent deal with the United States providing Israel with tanks.

Howard Hanson Visits Home

By JOHN LEE
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Wahoo—One of Wahoo's five favorite sons will find the home of his childhood much changed upon his homecoming Monday.

The gingerbread-laden white frame house on Linden St. was in poor repair after being through several careless hands—until it fell into those of the Woman's Club of Wahoo.

Dr. Howard Hanson had grown up there and in those rooms launched an illustrious career of music composition at the age of seven, writing "just some little piano pieces."

Retiring Head
Now retired after 40 years at Rochester University's Eastman School of Music, Hanson will be before the Bishop Neumann High School concert band to conduct his "Chorale and Alleluia" as one of the highlights of the homecoming day.

The renovated basement of the home of his youth will be the place in a good many years.

The house stood empty and the yard hadn't been raked in seven years when Dr. Hanson paid the back taxes on it to "get it out of hock," then turned it over to the Saunders County Historical Society, which expressed interest in preserving it.

Woman's Club
In 1963 the Woman's Club took on the job of restoring it and has spent over $7,500 turning the once-unfinished basement into a bright, cozy club room.

As the basement was dug out and enlarged, truckloads of accumulated refuse went with it. In went a new concrete floor, concrete block foundation and fiber board ceiling.

Also installed were a new furnace, light fixtures, a donated stove and refrigerator. Piles of trading stamps equipped it with chairs, tables and coffee urns.

Under the direction of Mrs. Phil Ekblad, project chairman and past president of the club, the 98 members have begun on the upper floors with a renovation project that is hoped will be completed this summer, including landscaping by the Garden Club.

Contributions Made
Several contributions have been made toward the museum displays that will be housed there.

"I hope he'll be satisfied when he sees it," commented Mrs. Ekblad.

"I'm very pleased that this is being done, and glad to have this chance to see it for the first time," Dr. Hanson said. "I had a very pleasant childhood there."

The pride of Wahoo will address an evening banquet of the historical society before attending as a special guest the Bishop Neumann concert, directed by Don Johnson.

PREPARATIONS . . . are made for Hanson's homecoming by Miss Agda Johnson, left, Mrs. Ekblad, Mrs. J. R. Swanson and Mrs. R. C. Swanson.

Audience Pays Tribute To Hanson

By RUTH ARDIS

Dr. Howard Hanson, returning in triumph to his home state, received an ovation after his appearance at Nebraska Wesleyan University Sunday night which was a tribute not only to his ability as a conductor and composer but also to his reputation as one of the really great music educators on the American scene.

Dr. Hanson's appearance as conductor of members of the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra and the Wesleyan Concert Choir in his own compositions was a fitting climax to the dedication ceremonies for the Auditorium-Fine Arts Center. His vitality as a conductor and a person contradicts his age. Although he retired two years ago as director of the Eastman School of Music after forty years, he still retains his enthusiasm for music and life. Under his hand, the Lincoln Symphony gave a dramatic reading of his Symphony No. 5 (Sinfonia Sacra) and "Mosaics."

"Mosaics," which was composed to convey Dr. Hanson's impressions of the changing lights on the mosaics at Palermo, is a series of short musical sections in varying moods, principally dramatic and somber. The Sinfonia Sacra is also programmatic, based on the occurrences of the first Easter. Both works were projected as dramatic, moving music which was well-performed.

Balance, Precision
The Wesleyan Concert Choir joined the orchestra in presenting "The Cherubic Hymn" and "Song of Democracy."

The choir, which had been well trained by Dr. Leonard Paulson, achieved a fine balance and precision. The vocal parts of the "Song of Democracy" begin with a lush melodic passage which is unashamedly romantic before changing to an exciting sweep and impassioned climax. It was a thrilling performance.

A standing ovation was accorded Dr. Hanson at the conclusion. After repeated returns, he quieted the audience to make a few remarks about his great pleasure in returning to his native state. He said that the future in the arts may be not in the great metropolitan centers of the East or West but in the Midwest where nature is still pure and unspoiled.

The acoustics in the new auditorium are excellent. Even the softest sounds from the orchestra and choir were easily heard by the audience. The addition of a hall of this size with its excellent acoustics is important not only to the campus but also to the musical activities of the city of Lincoln.

Great Week
It has been a great week for the students at Wesleyan and for the townspeople who have availed themselves of the opportunity to attend the dedicatory week activities. In addition to music, several other media of the fine arts have been emphasized. Seminars in art, modern dance, and creative writing have been well attended.

This festival is the first of three which will emphasize 1966 as "The Year of the Fine Arts" at Nebraska Wesleyan. The second festival, in April, will stress "Religion in the Fine Arts" and will include the dedication of the new Aeolian-Skinner organ which will complete the auditorium Wesleyan is certainly to be congratulated for its new Fine Arts Center.

Elderly Beatrice Man Dies In Burning House

Beatrice (UPI)—An elderly Beatrice man who had recently undergone amputation of both feet died of suffocation Sunday morning when he was trapped in a flaming house here.

He was Clarence Williams, 68, a native of the Liberty area southeast of here.

The owner of the home — Mrs. Laura Meadows — attempted to rush into the two-story frame house to the man's aid, but was restrained by onlookers.

The elderly woman told fire officials Williams had recently been discharged from a veterans hospital after the double amputation. She said he had been able to get around despite the loss of his feet.

It took considerable time to locate the body found in an upstairs bedroom.

A man who works part time in an animal clinic near the home, Orville Parde, was the first to report the fire. He said he saw Mrs. Meadows run from the house, turn around, and then attempt to return.

Fire officials said it appeared Mrs. Meadows had been asleep on the first floor when she noticed the smoke.

By the time the firemen reached the scene, the house was engulfed in flames.

Fire officials said the blaze apparently started in the basement and smoldered for some time during the night before breaking out into flames early Sunday.

Beatrice fireman Alvin Hansen suffered minor injuries when he was overcome by smoke and fell off a ladder. He was treated and released from a Beatrice hospital.

Firemen were investigating the possibility that the fire may have been caused by a gas explosion.

McCook Woman Keeps 1000 Fish In Basement Aquarium

McCook (AP) — Mrs. Vern Thornburgh of McCook has turned her basement over to an aquarium for 35 varieties of fish, including piranhas, sharks and pre-ice age catfish.

She began her hobby 15 years ago with a few tropical fish and it has grown to the present 1,000 fish class. She expects to have more than 60 varieties when she receives a shipment soon.

Mrs. Thornburgh and her husband study the spawning habits of the fish, separate the young from the parents to keep cannibalistic fish from eating the offspring, and doctor the ill or injured fish.

Separate tanks are used so small fish are not attacked or eaten.

The couple presently has three varieties of sharks in the collection.

Mrs. Thornburgh explained that sharks are hard to keep because of their habits. "A male shark chased his mate in an aquarium until she jumped out the top and was caught in a wire mesh." Doctor and kept away from the

Hastings Auto Collector Buys Hitler's 'Fortress On Wheels'

Hastings (AP)—Adolph Hitler's specially designed "Fortress on Wheels" has arrived in Hastings to join John Quirk's collection of antique and unusual automobiles.

Quirk purchased the Hitler vehicle from Thomas Barrett of Scottsdale, Ariz., who described it as the heaviest car ever built and one of the longest. It measures 24½ feet in length and weighs four and one-half tons.

The Grosser 770 Mercedes-Benz has eight-cylinder, 450-horsepower engine, with six speeds forward, and rolls on 10-ply tires having steel inner-lining. It was made in 1940 and is rated a 10-passenger vehicle.

The windows are of inch-thick bullet-proof glass, a steel bullet-proof guard may be cranked into place back of the rear seat, and there is a Luger holster built into the dashboard. The right side of the front seat adjusts to form a platform on which the former German dictator could stand and wave to crowds.

The car reportedly was captured at Hitler's hideaway at Berchtesgaden, Bavaria, by the 101st Airborne Infantry of the Army in 1945.

Sticky Question Box

By WILLIAM O. DOBLER

Have you ever been in court on something such as a traffic offense and had to answer a simple "guilty" or "not guilty" to the question of your plea? We have heard complaints from people who had to do so and they don't like it. They admit they ran a stop sign, were going over the speed limit or whatever else the infraction might be.

They are willing to take the consequences of their action. They want to enter a plea of guilty but would also like to explain the circumstances. Maybe with the sun in their eyes, they didn't see the sign or a reflection of light made it look like the green signal was on when the red one was staring them in the face. Maybe they were speeding from lack of thought due to some very disturbing experience. While they know they broke the law, they would like to have it known that they did so unintentionally. It falls to the court to answer guilty and give no explanation of the mitigating circumstances.

Questions and answers can be a problem in many ways. In Birmingham, England, a minister probably wishes he had never polled his parishioners. He asked them if they wanted early or late Sunday morning services. The disturbing thing was that only 60 out of 5,000 parishioners replied, at all.

In Salerno, Italy, a priest was conducting a wedding ceremony. The groom was asked if he would take the prospective bride in holy matrimony. The groom asked that the question be repeated. It was repeated and the groom replied: "I don't want her." Consternation followed, with the bride fainting and the groom walking from church. But the couple were soon returned to the altar where the question was put a third time to the groom who reportedly sighed and said, "Yes."

And how many times have you faced a question such as, "Which should we buy first, carpeting or new furniture?" Without thinking too fast, you reply that carpeting should come first. You have immediately put your stamp of approval on the purchase of new carpeting and at a very early date. Perhaps you didn't intend to buy it now but you felt neatly into the trap. Or, on a beautiful spring day you might be asked whether you prefer to paint the screen doors or wash the kitchen walls. The question is a tough one because it doesn't include some of the alternatives you had thought about. It says nothing about fishing, golfing or just relaxing in the shade. Again, if you think too slowly, you are apt to express a preference between painting and scrubbing and then you have done yourself in.

The editor of the Christian Science Monitor recently discussed the question in a more serious vein. He has become concerned over a test called Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory (MMPI) that was administered to junior high students in New York. The test, according to Editor Erwin D. Canham, goes deeply into sex to probe for abnormalities. Many of the questions on sex, he says, are too disgusting even to print. The test, he says, is a searching invasion of privacy and is full of subtle trick questions.

Through business, government an education, the test is being distributed at the rate of 500,000 copies a year. As an example, Canham cited a question or statement that demanded a simple true or false reply. It was: "I like movie love scenes." How would you answer, he asked. He stated that he would have to reply that it depends on the love scene but true or false is the only answer permitted.

"Other questions," said Canham, "dig into a sense of personal guilt, or doom. Such as: 'I have had very peculiar and strange experiences.' T or F. Or 'I have not lived the right kind of life.' Or 'I dislike taking a bath.' Conversely: 'Dirt frightens or disgusts me.' And: 'I like repairing a door latch.' I suppose an affirmative answer suggests one is a possible burglar. Great!"

Perhaps the test is like a lie detector—if you have nothing to hide, you have nothing to fear but we are not so sure of this. How about the question, "I dislike taking a bath." If you answer "true," it might mark you as a person with excessive modesty or one who is just plain dirty. But you may have answered "true" merely because you much prefer a shower to a bath. There is a substantial area of concern in the growing use of such tests. They are an invasion of privacy and potentially dangerous to the character of the individual.

Anytime you try to stereotype people, you are running a substantial risk. No two people are exactly alike so how can they be classified with a simple yes-or-no answer to the same question? Both may answer "yes" to the question and have entirely different things in mind. We ought to avoid such efforts to cast the whole human race out of the same mold.

Matter Of Bathing

Our Scientists Recognized

The Soviet Academy of Science has elected three Americans to membership. This does not mean that the three can no longer be trusted. It was not a political election. Rather it was in line with the long standing internationalism in science.

The three are: Profs. Severo Ochoa and Richard Courant of New York University and Prof. Herman F. Mark of the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. All of them have made substantial contributions to science.

As an interesting aside it should be noted that none of the three was native born. All three, instead, felt required to leave their native countries because of racial or political pressure. They were a part of the great acquisition of scientists that also brought Enrico Fermi and Albert Einstein to the United States.

Prior to World War II the United States had a rather small collection of scientists and was not producing very many. This was a land unusually wealthy in raw materials and more interested in producing things. Science only flourished in the have-not countries. While the Einsteins and Fermis were developing elsewhere Americans were joking about absent minded professors who ate the frog for lunch instead of the sandwich.

But the sanctuary this country offered to scientists encouraged many of them to immigrate here. They turned out to be the protectors of today's considerable body of U.S. science. We no longer joke about absent minded professors. This was one of the substantial benefits we got from World War II.

We have come a long way since 1940. We owe a great deal to these harried fellows who fled from their homelands. They have contributed immeasurably toward our highly technical society.

Too Narrow A View

It is hoped that a proposed limitation of 25 percent of total load on power imports in Nebraska never comes into formal being. Such a recommendation has come from a committee of the Nebraska Power Industry Committee, a creation of the Legislature including all major power interests in the state.

Even the uninformed should be able to see that such an artificial limitation for the state could seriously handicap Nebraska and could be a substantial expense. What happens if we reach the 25 percent import quota but still can buy power cheaper from outside the state than we can manufacture it ourselves?

And what happens if we reach the 25 percent limit and lack a local supply of wholesale power? Obviously, we could be in serious trouble in either event.

Such an artificial limitation could do us no good but could hurt us greatly. It would fly in the face, too, of the growing trend toward inter-connection of power blocs and generation in the range of millions rather than thousands of kilowatts.

The limitation would tend to spur the construction of local generation facilities but what is the benefit of this? We should have some local generation for security reasons but beyond this, generation becomes a burden if it is more costly than the importation of power.

Power generation can be the means of political strength and dictatorial rates. It can only be assumed that some power interests in Nebraska seek just an advantage in advocating a 25 percent limit on power imports. Power at the lowest possible cost should be the top priority among all power groups in the state.

The Anniversary Day

February 21, which is today, is historically noted for the degree of bad weather it brings to these parts. And on looking down the pages of history we see only two events worthy of note.

It was on this date in 1630 that the American colonists got their first taste of popcorn.

Dodd Favored By Aircraft Concerns

WASHINGTON—This column has underestimated the enterprise of Sen. Tom Dodd, D-Conn., in solving his transportation problem.

He not only drives an Oldsmobile owned by a Connecticut contractor, but he also flies in style around the country in assorted company planes.

He commutes regularly between Connecticut and the capital, for instance, in a plane belonging to the United Aircraft Corporation. He also sends his family back and forth via this free transportation, and once he arranged to fly even his pet poodle to Connecticut in a United Aircraft plane.

The plane waited for 30 minutes while Dodd's staff struggled to box Beau, the poodle, in a crate suitable for air travel. Then company officials, who had boarded the plane and were eager to take off, refused to waste any more time waiting for a dog. The senator was obliged to find other transportation for Beau.

But Dodd, if not his dog, is always welcome on board a United Aircraft plane. For he happens to be a member of the Senate Space Committee, and the company is deeply involved in the space business.

For his part, the senator always seems happy to help any company that flies him around. In a typical intra-office memo, a former assistant, Gerry Zeiller, reported to Dodd on May 12, 1965:

"Joe Barr of United Aircraft visited the office yesterday and had with him Bill Dell of United Technology, a subsidiary of United Aircraft."

"You will recall that we arranged for a demonstration for United Technology of their snap-on, 120-inch solid fuel booster rockets some months ago with Jim Gehrig and the Space Committee staff."

"Barr and his associates would now like to see some general language incorporated in the space committee report such as I have attached with this memo."

Kaman Aircraft Corporation has also made a plane available to Dodd whenever he needed transportation. For example, his daily schedule for May 16, 1965, contains this note:

"Kaman aircraft will fly you to Willimantic. The plane will leave from Butler. Arthur Crosbie will meet you at the Windham airport in Willimantic. The plane will wait for you in Willimantic and fly you to Hartford."

Two days earlier, by an interesting coincidence, Dodd called upon Secretary of the Air Force Eugene Zuckert to urge him to award an Air Force contract to Kaman. Last year the senator also brought pressure upon Lockheed Aircraft, one of the nation's biggest defense contractors, to grant a subcontract to Kaman.

Adm. Hayes Urges Littoral Strategy

WASHINGTON—Generals and admirals thinking in conventional terms of America's past wars have failed to grasp the meaning of limited warfare that would stop short of committing large masses of land troops in Asia. That is the conclusion drawn from the fact that the principal analyst-philosopher of the limited or littoral (coastal region) strategy has never had a serious hearing from the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He is rear admiral (Ret.) John D. Hayes, who in 1954 wrote an analysis of peripheral strategy, littoral tactics and limited war. This is an exposition of the kind of proposal made by Lt. Gen. James Gavin for limiting the war in Viet Nam to a series of coastal enclaves. Gavin testified before the Fulbright committee on how his theory could be applied.

Hayes would use ground troops to hold specific areas backed up by the full might of America's sea and air power. Updating his concept of littoral tactics, which he believes will eventually be adopted in Viet Nam, Hayes a year ago quoted from his original thesis in the conviction that its validity cannot be challenged:

"To effect a sound integrated strategy there must be a system of tactics which will fully employ all military specialties. Such a system of tactics for peripheral strategy is one that uses the littoral of the world as the new borders of the United States. The littoral becomes the line from which operations are projected in offense, the line on which defense is conducted. The striking power of air forces, the mobility of sea forces and the holding power of land forces can all be used on this line. It is the line that contains a continental enemy."

"Since the enemy can be kept behind this line without too much difficulty, it does not have to be held at all points as does a line in land tactics. Our strength need only be concentrated at selected points chosen for their political and military significance. Ground forces will face a continental land mass with its continued support insured by naval forces. The striking power of air forces will be the main weapon of offense, and airborne operations from the littoral will be used when feasible and suitable."

Failure to understand the potential of the littoral strategy has proved very costly since World War II, Hayes believes. He cites China and Korea as tragic examples of what this failure has meant.

In 1949 instead of retaining bastions on China's exposed coasts, he wrote, we retreated behind a water barrier to an imaginary oceanic line drawn through Japan, Okinawa and the Philippines. This was announced as the line on which Washington would conduct our defense and the policy of containment. Many observers have believed that withdrawal to this line, attributed to the unwillingness of the American people to risk another total war, triggered the communists into the attack on South Korea.

Profiles In Science

One often hears of a son who goes into his father's business and makes a go of it. But it is not often that one hears of a father going into a son's business and becoming a great success at that.

An example of this anomaly was John Dollond, who was born in London in 1706 of French descent. His family had emigrated from France when Louis XIV revoked a royal edict granting freedom of worship. The Dollond family, along with many others of the French exiles, became silk weavers in England.

Dollond was left an orphan at five, but he was ambitious and determined, and although he had little help he industriously set about educating himself even while at the loom. He learned languages, mathematics and especially optics and astronomy.

Even after he had a growing family, and was forced to work harder and longer, he studied. As his son Peter grew into adulthood he educated him.

Peter Dollond did not want to become a weaver and made use of the education his father had given him by becoming a manufacturer of lenses. He was very successful, and eventually his father gave up weaving and joined his son in making lenses.

The elder Dollond's hero was Sir Isaac Newton, who besides his very famous work in mathematics and theoretical physics had written a great deal about optics. Newton had decided that an object seen through a refracting telescope must necessarily be unclear because of the rim of prismatic lights, or colors, that surrounded the object viewed. Newton said this was an incorrigible fault of refracting telescopes and could never be put right.

This view was challenged by eminent German and Swedish scientists who, however, had no idea how to go about proving Newton wrong.

Dollond set himself the task of proving Newton right by trying to build a refracting telescope that did not have the rim of prismatic light. He deliberately set himself a task at which he expected (and indeed hoped) to fail. If he, Dollond, who, with his son, was the most eminent optician in Europe, could not make a flawless telescope lens, no one could. But to everybody's astonishment, and to his own surprise, Dollond succeeded. He used a hollow prism which he filled with water and was able by very fine adjustments to get rid of the distortions. Later he did away with the water-filled prism and accomplished the same thing with very fine glass.

He was given the Copley Medal of the Royal Society and was elected to the society for this and other improvements of the telescope. Copyright, 1966, Los Angeles Times

NASON ON EDUCATION

Uncle Sam Eyes Classroom Drifter

When a student drops out of high school, he is calling attention to the fact that as far as he is concerned, our educational system is not meeting his needs.

But what of the stay-in who quietly drifts out to graduation without really learning? Because he does not make a fuss about it, his plight goes unnoticed and uncorrected. But now the finger is pointed in his direction.

The National Selective Service Board recently announced the re-examination of high school graduates who have failed the literacy test.

Are students with high school diplomas—certifying the successful completion of 12 years of education—unable to read and write well enough to meet the minimum standards of the military? To whatever extent this is true, the high school diploma has become a meaningless scrap of paper.

It is time that legislative committees, boards of education, school superintendents and parents investigate the status of this problem in their community. It is high time that more attention be focused on the pupil who stays in school, causes no one any trouble, but ceases to learn.

No child should be allowed to continue in school and to receive a diploma without his parents being made fully aware that he is not learning to read and write satisfactorily. While I have observed this situation more frequently among children coming from disadvantaged homes, it is not restricted to this type of environment.

Jack was an 11th-grade student in an advantageously-located high school. The majority of students from this school enter college upon graduation.

Jack's grades were low, but he was passing. Asked to show a sample of his written work, he presented a report which he had prepared in the ninth grade. Pertaining to livestock production in California, it consisted of pictures cut from magazines and newspapers. The only writing in the entire report was his scrawled signature.

It turned out that he had been able to avoid writing for years. Yet within six months, he became proficient at it and so improved his grades that, upon graduation from high school, he was accepted as a freshman in college.

Whatever laws, community pressure or parental effort it takes, our high school students should be required to learn to read and write.

The extreme cases, such as that of Jack, and those discovered by selective service boards, call attention to the problem as a whole.

The number of students drifting through high school doing just enough to get by and not working up to their capacity is considerable. The cost of keeping such a non-student in school is just as great as the cost for a student who is really making an effort.

Morrison's Bid

Lincoln, Neb.

I wasn't surprised to see The Star jump in with all four feet to editorially support Morrison in his bid for the Senate. Of course, The Star has every right to do so. But may I urge that it confines its editorials to Page 4 for a fairly reported campaign rather than pursuing the usual not-so-subtle news placement policy of putting all stories about Democrats on the front page and if there is room inside, news about Republicans. The discrepancy I complain about is in news placement rather than writing.

Just one question about The Star's early stand: How can it be said that Morrison would be a voice in tune with the times if in the Senate when he, as governor, refused to support a desperately needed broadened tax base to meet state needs locally? Without it, it is no wonder we are having to go to the federal government for so much money.

How can we expect Morrison not to ignore economic problems in the Senate when he ignores them in his own state?

Then, too, why should we assume Mr. Johnson is not giving Morrison orders when it is a well-known fact the President is directing everyone else's activities?

An Apology

Lincoln, Neb.

I feel that the honor of Nebraska was tarnished and a sense of fair play reached an all-time low when three visiting poets who were on the Hazel Stebbins' show on Thursday, Feb. 17, were publicly insulted by one of our "leading" citizens who followed them on the air. I will not deny "this citizen" the right to hold his own opinion, stuffy though it is. But to insult visitors simply because they do not dress or shave as he does and to state it over the air is a shame to all Nebraskans.

So for all those in Lincoln and in Nebraska who believe in sincere friendliness to all our visitors, I wish to offer my sincerest apology for extremely bad taste. "We may not have to follow your example but we can show respect for your dedication to what you believe."

Sunny days around Shady Acres. Thirty days around the scatter.

It appears we now have 15 books of savings stamps — those gluey promises they give with the supermarket groceries. (When we have five books we could have turned them in for some bathroom shelves. But we held out.)

When we have 16½ books we can get a nifty floor polisher. We're pretty close to the mark. A long and sticky struggle, but we made it.

Nobody has quite figured out why 35 million American females would rather collect savings stamps than candy.

Psychologists have had a whack at it: "Savings stamps has a nice ring to it," a Michigan professor said. "It sounds thrifty and at the same time the housewife appears to be getting something she wants for nothing."

The industry is big enough that a Congressional committee has looked into it.

They asked if the stamps cost the supermarket about 3 per cent on each can of beans, didn't the market have to jack up the price to the housewife by three per cent, hey?

I don't recall the response. But it was pretty fuzzy. Something like the stamps increased business. And that cut the costs. So in the end, everybody got something for nothing. The market and the housewife and the stamp company.

That's togetherness, friends. Everybody going hippety-hop in the barley fields

Nobody asked me to appear before the committee. And more's the pity for I could have given them what goes on at the consumer level.

The lady of the scatter pastes up one book, and she is hooked.

She leafs through the catalog.

"Do you realize for two books we can get these three decorator pillows?"

"What do we need pillows for?" asks the gent. (The reason he says this is because he never pays any attention to how the house looks. And he has no appreciation of how she saves money. And so on.)

By the time she has reached three books, she is a fiend. Groceries are now only a means to the next book.

She dumps the sack on the sink and begins pasting the new stamps in the book.

"And just think"—lick, lick—"with three more books we can get"—lick, lick, stamp—"the Hotray Electric Room Heater. Or the Easy Day Portable Cleaner."

The breadwinner looks over the catalog.

He points out that right now they can get the Buddy Boy Fresh Water Spinning Rod. (2-pc tubular, six-seat, 6½ feet, Cat. No. 23.)

This nonsense is brushed off

As we approach the glittering end where we can get the Hotray Heater or the Easy Day Cleaner, we discover that for five additional books we can get a Happy Deluxe "Zig Zag" Portable Sewing Machine. (Push button reverse. Automatic bobbin winder. Pop-up darning and built-in sewing light. Cat. 55.)

"We'll have to save harder," says Madame. "Isn't there some place you could eat lunch where they give stamps?"

The car is gassed at a new station that gives stamps. It is three miles out of our way and probably costs gasoline to get there. But it helps fill those books.

Since he cannot have the Buddy Boy Fresh Water Spinning Rod, the gent of the scatter has lost a lot of enthusiasm.

He also begins to figure that if they give you a Happy Deluxe Sewing Machine, the cost is probably taken off a can of beans. He offers this opinion.

"Oh, Joe," says Madame, her gluey lips trembling. "I'm doing it all for you!"

And for this, gentlemen of the congressional committee, we haven't thought of an answer.

‘Animate Object’ In Loch Ness Film

London (AP)—British Defense Ministry experts have detected in a movie film taken at Loch Ness—home of the fabled Scottish monster—an “animate object” nearly 100 feet long moving along in the water at a speed of about 10 miles an hour.

The defense Ministry experts did not come right out and say the object was the Loch Ness monster, but their report is likely to satisfy the Scottish tourist industry.

The film of the object in Loch Ness was taken in 1959 and it was turned over for scrutiny by Britain’s Joint Air Reconnaissance Intelligence Center (JARIC).

Controversy over the monster legend has raged for more than 30 years, and it is likely to be stirred up again by JARIC’s findings.

The film was taken by Tim Dinsdale, author of a book on the monster legend, from a hillside 300 feet up on the banks of Loch Ness. It shows a triangular object estimated at five feet high moving through the water about 1,300 yards away.

Millions of Britons saw the film when it was shown on the television show “Panorama” a few years ago.

David James, former British legislator and leader of an organization investigating the Loch Ness phenomenon, sent the film recently to Lord Shackleton, Air Defense minister. Shackleton passed it on to the JARIC experts, recognized as among the world’s best photographic interpreters.

It was the first time that film or pictures of the “monster” had been subjected to such expert scrutiny.

The JARIC men took measurements of every frame of the film, taking into consideration light conditions, reflections, the angle of the object and the position of the camera.

They then compared it with a film of a small boat taken the same morning and traveling at about the same speed.

No Surface Vessel

The JARIC experts said the outline of the boat was irregular whereas the mystery object showed a smooth, or “continuous,” triangular outline. This was taken to rule out the possibility of the object being a surface vessel.

The 1,500-word JARIC report said:

“One can presumably rule out the idea that it is any sort of submarine vessel for various reasons which leaves the conclusion that it probably is an animate object.”

By a series of measurements and reasonings the JARIC experts also deduced that the object, although most of it was beneath water, was 92 feet long, and not less than 6 feet wide and 5 feet high. James is organizing a five-month expedition to the loch this summer.

“We are going on until we succeed in getting what we are after—a close-up movie film of the monster,” he said.

Lord Shackleton said of the new findings:

“I was really rather surprised when I read the report from JARIC. But I was very interested. I have always disbelieved in the monster.”

“Now I am even more mystified. But I find it difficult to discount the findings of this report.”

Ship Going Down After Collision

Bremen, Germany (AP)—A Norwegian tanker carrying 40,000 tons of crude oil collided with a British freighter in thick fog off the island of Helgoland Sunday and both vessels caught fire.

The tanker was abandoned in sinking condition but the freighter, its blaze under control, reported she was heading for Hamburg.

All 42 crew members of the Farsund-based tanker Anne Mildred Broevig, 25,454 tons, were rescued, according to the German Sea Rescue Society. The 17 crew members of the 876-ton coaster Pentland remained aboard as she limped away from the scene, about 40 nautical miles west of Helgoland.

The collision occurred at about dawn in the Elbe-Humber Lane, main shipping route between Britain and Germany. Within three hours, oil-fed flames engulfed the tanker and her stern was almost submerged.

Capt. A. Abrahamsen and three men were the last to leave ship as a German and a Finnish freighter, and an air rescue boat of the German Navy picked up the tanker’s entire crew. There were no reports of any injuries.

Three German tugs with firefighting equipment were trying to combat the blaze aboard the tanker but shipping experts with the rescue force said there was little hope of saving her.

The Pentland, which first radioed she was sinking, got the fire out and made provisional repair. A German sea rescue vessel and a German freighter escorted her, ready to take off the crew in case of an emergency. The fire aboard the Pentland was put under control by noon.

TOGETHERNESS MAPPED . . . by Flakes.

Outranked By Own Wife, Sailor Eager To Catch Up

Newport, R.I. (AP)—Donald Flakes shapes up as maybe the eagerest man in the U.S. Navy’s officer candidate school. He’s simply got to win his commission.

His 22-year-old wife, Nanette, is also a member of the school’s class of 1966 and has already made ensign.

Flakes, 25, is still in the ranks through no fault of his own.

The Navy commissions its girl officer candidates when they complete half the course. The men students, including Flakes, won’t become ensigns until they graduate in mid-March.

First Time

The Navy says it’s the first time a husband and wife ever went through officer candidate training at the same time.

The Flakes say it isn’t exactly together.

Donald is in the men’s section and Nanette in the women’s, half a mile away.

“It seems far,” Nanette says.

They live in separate barracks and see each other only on weekends.

The couple met at the University of New Mexico, where she was an English major and he studied business administration. She is the former Nanette Barrows, from San Leandro, Calif. Donald is from Ft. Worth, Tex.

Both came naturally to the military life. Nanette’s father spent 20 years in the Navy and Donald’s stepfather was an Air Force career man. Donald is thinking of making a career of the service, but Nanette plans to stay in only two years.

Supply Specialists

Both are specializing in supply work, he because of his business administration interests, she because “that makes it easier for the Navy to detail us together.”

When they get to supply school at Athens, Ga., they will fill out a “dream sheet,” the request for assignment. Donald says they’ll probably ask for destroyer duty.

One thing that is likely to follow him to sea is “quite a bit of kidding,” which he says stems from “the very fact that my wife outranks me.”

Strike City Poor People Are Seeking Better Life

Leland, Miss. (AP)—A five-acre grouping of tents and privies near this Mississippi Delta town is home to a community of Negroes who have abandoned their jobs on the great cotton plantations to seek a better life.

Known as Strike City, or Tent City, the community is announced by a highway sign picturing a black fist breaking a chain. The Delta Ministry, social action arm of the National Council of Churches, describes the settlement as "a symbol of protest and hope . . . to thousands of other Delta Negroes."

The population of Strike City varies. In early February it swelled to nearly 150, but since then has dropped considerably. Many families were shifted to a temporary tent site in Issaquena County, then moved to Mount Beulah, a former Negro college at Edwards, Miss.

Single Water Pump
The Negroes at Strike City live in green Army tents, use barbed wire clotheslines, a single hand water pump, and wood or coal heaters. A wood and concrete block structure built by vacationing University of Pennsylvania students over the Christmas holidays serves as a community center and communal kitchen.

Why are the Negroes there? "They haven't got nothing to lose on the plantation," says Mack Ingram, 27, one of the 49 Negroes who have lived in the tents since they struck a plantation last summer and were evicted.

Where Negroes once worked as slaves, their descendants work as share-croppers and tenant farmers on the cotton farms. The women and children who pick and chop cotton earn $3 a day during the six-month cotton season. Tractor drivers earn about $6.

Demanding $1.25
Last summer's strikers demanded $1.25 an hour.

Plantation owners say the economics of running large farms, increasingly mechanized, prevent them from paying more money to the farmhands. They point out fringe benefits, such as tenant houses and garden plots, that are furnished the Negroes.

The owner of a large cotton plantation in the Delta—the fertile western section of the state north of Vicksburg along the Mississippi River—emphatically denies any ill will on the part of the farm owners.

"There is a whole lot of good will on the part of the people who are accused of oppression," he said. "I'm not prejudiced against Negroes. Too many very shabby houses are inhabited. But that's part of a transition from a loss of heavy farm population. We haven't gotten down to an optimum of labor force and mechanization."

Begun as a home for the strikers, Strike City increased in size rapidly after a call went out for Negro poor, anywhere, to forsake the plantations and move in.

Recruiters Fan Out
Recruiters fanned out from the Delta Ministry, the Mississippi Freedom Democratic Party and the Mississippi Freedom Labor Union. The latter group was formed last summer during the strike.

To dramatize the Negroes' demands for food, jobs and land, a 30-hour occupation of a building at de-activated Greenville Air Force Base was carried out at the end of January. The newly formed Poor Peoples Conference, described as an organization of Negroes attempting to solve their own problems, said it conceived the idea of entering the air base.

However, the actual organization and planning of the move was handled by the three-party civil rights alliance.

Air Force police hauled the fighting cussing squatters from the building, and spokesmen for the Poor Peoples Conference said the eviction showed the federal government didn't care. They said the illegality of the invasion didn't concern them.

No Orders
The Poor Peoples Conference runs Strike City under a concept whereby everyone participates in decisions and virtually no one gives orders. James Phipps, a 20-year-old Chicago Negro and a Freedom Democratic Party worker with two years' experience in Mississippi, sums up the operation this way:

"This is run by the poor peoples. We can't come here and tell the poor peoples nothing."

ing. If they say go to Holmes County and bring some people in, we do that. If they want to come, we provide transportation. We tell the people that with the standards of living on the plantation, they would be better off at Strike City."

James Boyd, 45, a Holmes County sharecropper who moved in with his wife and 10 children, aged 5 to 18, on Feb. 2 wasn't sure what the future held. Boyd said he moved in because, "I'm in need. I ain't got nothing. A man came one night, a white man and a colored man. The instructions they give me was it was for my good if I accept. I don't know who they was."

Jeanette, his wife, spoke softly but angrily: "My children ain't never been in school like a child should, having to hoe and pick cotton. I ain't going to keep my younger children out of school."

School At Leland
Strike City children are sent to school in nearby Leland.

White and Negro civil rights workers, including ministers of the Delta Ministry, its "freedom corps" of 12 Mississippi Negroes, Freedom Democratic Party workers, and several bearded, boots-wearing "boppers"—the drifters of the movement—move in and out of Strike City.

Episcopal Bishop Paul Moore of Washington, chairman of the National Council of Churches' Delta Ministry, visited recently to get a firsthand look at the settlement.

The Delta Ministry, he said, was "in a supporting role, in any way we can help the people in Tent City, with tents, food, seeing people in Washington. We feel very strongly we shouldn't take over leadership. We could be paternalistic—a food distribution center, an old-fashioned soup kitchen. That's the band-aid approach."

Foundations have been poured for eight houses for some of the Negroes now living in tents. The houses are a project of Neighborhood Developers, Inc. of Jackson, Miss., which describes itself as "a non-profit corporation which gives grants to poor people for housing and job training." It says its funds come from private sources.

Lawrence Bader Declared Alive

Akron, Ohio (AP)—Lawrence J. Bader, the Akron appliance salesman who disappeared from a Lake Erie motor boat eight years ago, has been declared officially alive.

The declaration came after Mrs. Mary Lou Bader, identified Bader as her husband from a picture in the courtroom of Summit County Probate Judge Nathan Koplin.

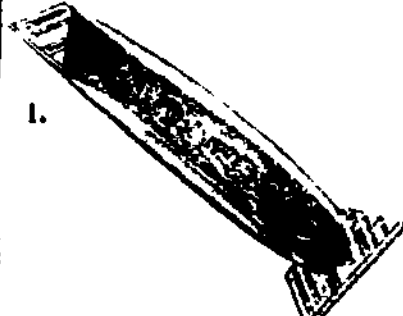

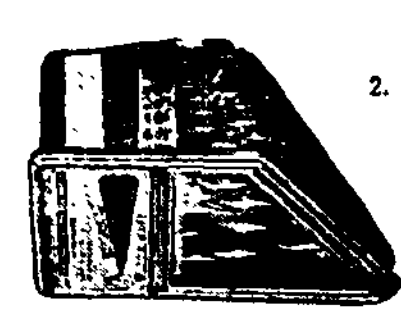

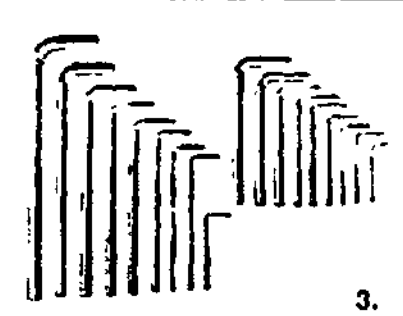

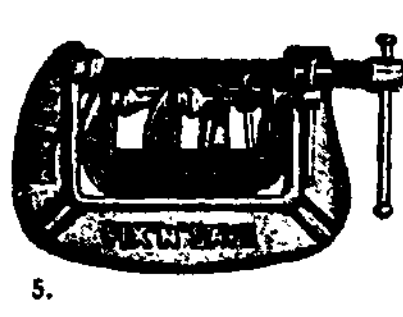

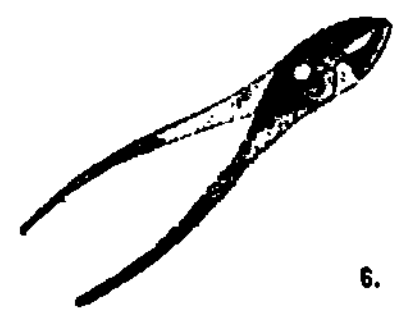

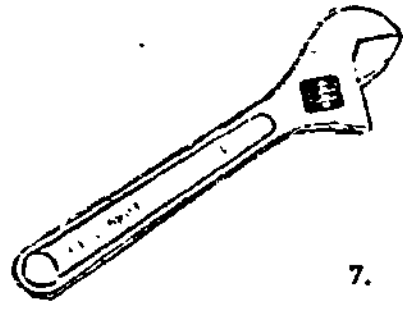

Bader was presumed drowned and declared dead until a chance meeting last February with an old family friend.

Bader insisted he was John Fritz Johnson, an Omaha television personality, but his identity was firmly established by fingerprints.

Judge: 1964 Case Starts Uncertainty

... ESCOBEDO

Chicago (AP)—A federal appeals court judge told the nation's top lawyers Sunday that a 1964 U.S. Supreme Court decision has left the questioning and detention of suspects in criminal cases a largely uncharted no-man's land.

J. Edward Lumbard, New York, chief judge of the Second Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, said that, as a result, long range efforts are being made by the American Bar Association (ABA) to formulate guidelines that could be applied by courts and by law enforcement bodies throughout the land.

"Yet, every day hundreds of cases must be decided in 50 states and in our federal courts," he added. "Each case has its unique facts which bear on only one small area of no-man's land."

Can Do Nothing

"The courts cannot just do nothing as the legislatures have done—they must decide the particular case before them and they must decide it without any knowledge of police requirements, with little understanding of how the protection of individual rights may be affected, and surely with no information about the far-reaching effect their decisions will have on law enforcement generally, and the have their dicta may cause."

Judge Lumbard, who is chairman of a special ABA committee on the administration of criminal justice, spoke at a joint luncheon of the Fellows of the American Bar Foundation and the National Conference of Bar Presidents, held in conjunction with the ABA's midwinter meeting.

In its 1964 decision, the Supreme Court nullified the Illinois murder conviction of Danny Escobedo which was based on his confession obtained after police refused to let him confer with his attorney who had come to the police station for that purpose.

"The wording of Justice Goldberg's majority opinion has raised more questions than it answered," Judge Lumbard said. "Ever since then the debate has raged in the law reviews, the press and in almost every state as to the extent to which confessions may be used."

Confusion

He added:

"When such a case is decided by the Supreme Court and when five members of that court rest their decision on interpretations of the federal constitution which they announce for the first time, then we may have confusion and uncertainty on one hundred fold."

"If we leave no-man's land uncharted, if we have no rules, then... we have the supreme court and our highest state courts writing piecemeal a code of criminal procedure on the basis of what their ideas are concerning sweeping generalities of the bill of rights."

Judge Lumbard also cited the June, 1963 Supreme Court decision nullifying the Florida robbery conviction of Clarence Gideon, who was financially unable to hire a lawyer and was denied counsel to defend him at his trial.

That ruling led to the setting aside of thousands of similar convictions and the release of many prisoners who could not be re-tried.

Krueger Elected Representative

Omaha (AP)—The Nebraska State Home Builders Association announced election of Wayne N. Dowhower of North Platte as president.

Other officers are Kenneth Nelson, Norfolk, vice president; E. J. Crow, Paxton, secretary, and Loran Crosby, Grand Island, treasurer. Dowhower, Nelson and Crow were re-elected.

Clarence Krueger, Lincoln, is Nebraska representative of the National Association of Home Builders.

'Right Candidate Hard To Discover'

By LOUIS HARRIS

Behind the facade of early trumpeting of optimism over their chances in the congressional races next November, leaders of the Republican and Democratic Parties are conducting a search for the "right" candidate to run. This is the season of disqualification, when the potential political wheat is separated from the chaff.

Harris

The latest Harris Survey offers a guide to both parties on what types of candidates to avoid. Here are some of the key findings:

—It is nine times worse to be a member of the KKK than to be a Catholic (though it is only four times worse in the South).

—An admitted atheist will be in six times more trouble than a millionaire.

—It is five times worse to be a member of the John Birch Society than to be Jewish (though it is only twice as bad in the South).

—A candidate born in another country is in deeper trouble than one who earns his living as a movie actor.

It is seven times worse to be a Communist Party member than a professional football player.

It is a bigger handicap to be a woman than to be a divorced and remarried man.

A candidate who doesn't go to church regularly will have a harder time than a Negro (though both will have an equally hard time in the South).

Least political bosses on the prowl for likely candidates jump to any hasty conclusions from the above analysis, the following additional facts should be borne in mind, all other things remaining equal: One in four people would rather not vote for a Negro for Congress (almost one in two in the South).

One in eight would feel less like supporting a divorced or remarried man for office.

One in eight does not look with comfort on the thought of being represented in Washington by a pro football player.

One in four voters has a rather dim view of movie actors running for high office.

One in eight would look elsewhere to cast his vote if the candidate is Jewish.

One in eight has a prejudice against a nominee who is a millionaire.

One in 11 (one in six in the South) would probably vote against a Catholic running for the House of Representatives.

A carefully drawn national cross section of voters was asked:

"I want to call out different kinds of people. Now suppose a candidate were running for Congress who is a member of the John Birch Society (etc.) Do you think this would make you feel less like voting for him, more or wouldn't it make much difference?"

	Less Likely Per Cent	More Likely Per Cent	No Difference Per Cent
Communist Party member	53	2	5
Member of KKK	84	2	14
Admitted atheist	76	1	23
Member of John Birch Society	61	2	37
Admitted atheist	59	1	40
Not regular church goer	34	4	62
Born in another country	22	3	65
Negro	24	3	71
Movie actor	24	3	74
Millionaire	12	2	76
Divorced and remarried	16	1	83
Pro football player	12	3	84
Jewish	12	3	85
Catholic	9	4	87

Some astute members of congressional screening committees will immediately observe from these results that all 15 types of backgrounds appear to lose more votes than they gain. The conclusion some will inevitably draw is that the safe way to pick a candidate is to avoid all of these 15 types like the plague. Surely, it might be reasoned, anyone who is not one of these types must start out with a built-in advantage.

The only trouble with this safe way of selecting candidates for Congress is that 98% of the total electorate is made up of people who are members of these 15 types, as follows:

Women	51
Catholic men	31
Jewish men	5
Protestant Negro men	5
Non-regular church going, non-Negro	21
Protestant men	21
Others	34
Total	100

All of the foregoing, of course, illustrates a fact of modern political life: It is getting harder all the time to be a successful political boss who picks only winners.

Berlin Building Boom

Berlin (AP)—Construction in West Berlin rose to a record $600 million in 1965 compared to $495 million the previous year, a government official reports. He said projects planned for this year, including 18,000 new apartments, should continue the construction boom.

Sterling F. Mutz, 77, Lincoln Attorney, Dies

Sterling F. Mutz, 77, a Lincoln lawyer who was active in Democratic politics, died Sunday morning.

Born in Burton, Mr. Mutz graduated from Alsworth High School and attended the University of Nebraska where he earned his law degree in 1911.

Active in Democratic politics for a number of years, Mr. Mutz was the Nebraska chairman of Woodrow Wilson's candidacy for president and served as state chairman of the Roosevelt Business and Professional League from 1932-40.

Bar Member
During his years of law practice Mr. Mutz was a member of the American and Nebraska State Bar Associations and served as the president of the Lincoln Bar Association in 1941.

He was active in the Episcopal Church and served for 12 years on the Bishop Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees. He served as a hearing officer for the Department of Justice from 1941-53 and was a U.S. commissioner for the District of Nebraska for four years.

He was a member of Scottish Rite, Mystic Shrine and Lincoln Consistory No. 2, Woodmen Circle, tribe of Ben Hur and Sons of the American Revolution, serving as president in 1942.

Survivors are his widow, Virginia; a son, Sterling F. Jr., Lincoln; a daughter, Mrs. Jessica Good, New York City; brothers, R. Dennis, Fowler, Colo., and Walter D., Los Angeles, Calif.; sisters Mrs. Eunice Herd, Des Moines, Iowa, and Mrs. Dorothy Hope Young, Fresno, Calif.

Services will be at 11 p.m. Tuesday at St. Matthew's Church, with Fr. James Stillwell and Fr. William Cross officiating.

Washington Rhodesian Office Causes Black African Anger

Lagos, Nigeria (AP) — The opening of a Rhodesian information office in Washington has made the United States a target of black African ire. The U.S. decision to let Prime Minister Ian Smith's white minority Rhodesian regime have a voice in America has caused mounting resentment in Nigeria and Ghana. The U.S. promise that it will not recognize Smith's government and that it supports economic sanctions against the breakaway British territory has failed to appease the critics.

The kindest description of the U.S. action in Lagos this week was the diplomatic phrase "deeply puzzling," contained in a protest note to Washington.

Several officials who declined to be named termed the U.S. decision hypocritical. At a news conference here this week, U.S. Ambassador Elbert G. Mathews tried to explain the American position. But he apparently failed to convince Nigerians.

Attacks on the United States in Nigerian and Ghanaian publications and broadcasts are the harshest since race riots in Los Angeles last year.

Now You Can... Throw Away Your Denture Adhesive

New Dental Discovery Ends Need for Pastes and Powders

New York, N. Y. (Special)—After years of research, scientists have discovered an entirely new substance to make false teeth fit beautifully. Denture wearers report such success with this new substance in refitting loose dentures that they no longer need paste and powder adhesives.

This new dental discovery is a soft, pliable plastic that is applied directly to dentures from the tube. User then inserts dentures into mouth and bites down. Instantly, this new substance molds to the exact contours of mouth and gums, holding dentures firmly in place through soothing suction—so powerful that even those with difficult lowers can laugh, talk and eat anything with complete confidence. Looseness, slipping, and clicking disappear. Sore spots are quickly relieved. One application lasts weeks, stays soft and pliable in use. Nightly cleansing does not wash it away, yet it is easily removed when desired. It will not harm plates. This substance makes it possible to refit and reline worn dentures at home, saving over $100 on costly relining work.

This new substance is now available at drugstores under the name Cushion Grip, with a full money-back guarantee. Get Cushion Grip today and end the need for paste and powder adhesives forever!

of the suburban areas

Suburbia was busy with parties this weekend. And decked in their oriental partying clothes for an evening of Far Eastern cuisine and entertainment Saturday were (standing left to right) Roy Carlson, Mrs. Robert Warren, Mrs. Hulbert, O.D. Hulbert, and Orville Bakk. Seated are (left to right) Lloyd Harold, Ken Daniels, Ted Kay, William Elliott, Mrs. Elliott, William Splichal, and seated on the floor (left to right) are Robert Warren, Mrs. Bakk, Mrs. Harold, Mrs. Daniels, Mrs. Kay, Mrs. Splichal, and Mrs. Carlson.

PARK MANOR

Oriental costumes and decorations transformed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Carlson into a Chinese festival when the Carlsons entertained at a dinner party Saturday evening. The menu was straight out of Canton as guests were treated to exotic Chow Mein, sweet and sour pork, a tropical salad, and an unnamed Eastern dessert.

Later in the evening host, hostess, and guests were entertained with slides of the Orient. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Harold provided accompanying narration to their photographs of Japan and China.

LINCOLN HEIGHTS

With a flash from the skies and a hearty hi-ho and bravo, we would like to make known that justice and human kindness do prevail on earth. A most obvious example befell Mrs. Lyle Rice Tuesday, Feb. 8. While performing her duties as librarian a surprise birthday party swept in, complete with lighted cake, kool-aid, paper cups, plastic forks and beaming faces. It seems that Mrs. Rice keeps a calendar on which students circle their birthdays. Her kind birthday greetings

For the ceremony, which will be solemnized Saturday evening, March 19, at the First Methodist Church, Miss Martin has named Miss Tracy Gaughan as her maid of honor. Mrs. Cort Gillingham will be the bridesmatron, and bridesmaids will be Miss Marilyn Young, Miss Nancy Johnson and Miss Colleen Hagerty.

Miss Sandra Weston will be the flower girl, and ringbearer will be Kelly Smith.

Lighting the chancel candles for the 7:30 o'clock service will be Miss Linda Purbaugh and Mrs. Gary Bornemeier.

Dennis Smith will serve Mr. Kempkes as best man, and the corps of ushers will include the bridegroom-elect's brother, Brian Kempkes, Tim Gillispie, Jerry Shadley and Donald Merrill.

PEO Chapter

Mrs. L. R. Folsom will be hostess to the members of Chapter A1, PEO, at a 12:30 o'clock luncheon, Monday, at her home, 3315 Grimsby Lane.

Assisting hostesses will be Mrs. R. S. Patterson and Mrs. Dale Sass.

2NT Pass 3♦ Pass
3♦ Pass 4♦ Pass

Opening lead—jack of spades.

This hand occurred in the final round of the masters team of four championships played in Washington, D.C., in 1961 The Kantar-Miles-Roth-Gabrilovitch team, which won the event, gained 1,470 points on this one deal against the Crawford-Rapee-Stone-Roth-Kay-Silodor aggregation.

Marshall Miles (East) had to make a good play to defeat the slam reached by Stone-Roth on the bidding shown.

Kantar led a spade and Roth won the jack in dummy and returned the ten of hearts. Miles played low and Kantar won the trick with the king. Kantar returned a spade, which Miles ruffed, and South went down one.

Miles' duck of the ten of hearts was both courageous and effective. Had he taken the ten with the ace, Roth undoubtedly would have made the hand after ruffing two hearts in dummy.

The slam was also bid at the other table. Here Gabrilovitch became declarer at six diamonds on a different sequence of bids and received a low heart lead. Gabrilovitch had used Blackwood at one point in the auction, and East had doubled the five heart response. Gabrilovitch then bid six diamonds over the double.

The heart lead simplified the play greatly, and declarer had no trouble making twelve tricks for a score of 1,370 points.

The slam was actually below par on the combined North-South cards, though it was far from being a terrible contract. It was the kind of hand where any slight variation in the bidding or play could—and in this case did—result in a catastrophe.

Probably East should not have doubled five hearts at the second table, because the double instructed West to lead a heart and East could not possibly be sure that a heart lead was best for the defense. East should have kept quiet throughout.

DAR, PTA Programs

In observation of Washington's birthday on Tuesday, Feb. 22, the members of Deborah Avery Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will entertain at their annual Colonial Tea at the Governor's Mansion, with state DAR officers as special guests.

Mrs. Frank Morrison and the chapter regent, Mrs. Wilbur E. Oxley, will greet the guests assisted by chapter officers, and presiding at the tea table will be Mrs. B. C. McLean, past chapter regent.

A program of songs will be presented by Mr. Alice Bieberstein, and members of the hostess committee are Mrs. Carl J. Olson, chairman, Mrs. L.D. Arnot, Mrs. H.C.M. Burgess, Mrs. Glenn Johnston, Mrs. Myron D. Noble, Mrs. Arthur George, Mrs. Fred Moeller, Mrs. Clifford Hicks, Mrs. Charles Mulvaney, Mrs. Samuel S. Faires, Mrs. R. B. Stapleton, Mrs. M.M. Liggett and Mrs. Arthur O. Ledford.

State officers attending will include Mrs. W. P. Venable, Columbus, past state regent; Mrs. Elmer Lund, Genoa, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Merrill Hewitt, Omaha, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles T. Milligan, McCook, historian; Miss Nina Nation, Alliance, librarian; Mrs. Leo D. Haral, Beatrice, regent of Elizabeth Montague Chapter and her executive board; and Miss Blanche Newhall, Lincoln, regent of St. Leger Cowley Chapter and her executive board.

PTA Founders Day is being observed this month by local units of the organization at February meetings. The Founders Day program of Everett PTA will be held at 7:30 o'clock, Tuesday evening, in the school auditorium. The group's guest speaker will be Lincoln City Councilwoman, Mrs. Helen Boosalis.

Guest speaker for the Founders Day program of Brownell PTA, at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday evening, will be Dr. Guy Matson, who will speak on the topic, "The Development of Our Children."

During the program, PTA Life Memberships will be awarded.

Preceding the February meeting of the Maude Rousseau School Parents Organization Tuesday evening, the members will entertain at a 7:15 o'clock reception honoring Miss Ruth Eichman, former principal who has been reassigned, and Mrs. Frances Enevoldson, the new principal.

Highlighting the meeting will be a program, "The Mystery of Modern Math", by Mrs. Dorcas Cavett, TV mathematics teacher, assisted by Vern Martin, faculty member.

At the recent Founders Day program of Norwood Park PTA, PTA Life Memberships were presented to Mrs. Merle Eldenborg, a past president of the unit; Miss Phebe Randles, member of the faculty; and Lester Woodrum, a leader of the area's youth activities.

The program was followed by a coffee hour.

ABBY

skip parents and wife

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I felt so sorry for that poor man who couldn't keep his trousers on in the house because the heat bothered him. My son had the same problem. He is allergic to heat and high humidity. That man should see an allergist or the trousers worn in HIS house will be worn by his wife—to work, because her husband won't be able to wear anything on his lower extremities. And there are very few jobs to which a man can wear a sarong.

My son took his military in the National Guard. The six months in winter and fall were fine, but the two weeks in summer were intolerable. He couldn't keep his pants on. The Army doctor gave him C.O. a written statement saying he was not to assign my son to any duties that would make him perspire. Now he works in an air-conditioned office and goes home to an air-conditioned house.

HIS MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I would like to know what kind of duty a guy can draw in the service that would guarantee him no sweat.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: This friend of mine has been going around with a married man for the past two years, off and on. The only time it was really "off" was when his wife and her parents found out about it. Now that things have cooled off, she has started to see him again. My problem is that she tells her parents that she is with ME when she is really with HIM. I have asked her not to involve me in this because I do not approve of this sort of thing, but it doesn't do any good. Should I tell her parents or the man's wife?

JUNIPER

DEAR JUNIPER: Skip the parents and the wife, but DO tell your friend that you won't cover for her any more. So she'd better either straighten up and fly right or find herself another patsy.

★ ★ ★

DEAR ABBY: "NERVOUS AND AFRAID'S" letter brought back memories of those terrible days when I, too, was nervous and afraid. Nervous about every new situation, and afraid to face people. I had doubts about my sanity, but wouldn't admit that I needed psychiatric help because I thought I might bring "shame" on my family. Finally I had to be committed to a psychiatric hospital. It was only for a short time, but during my stay there every shameful act, every reason for guilt feelings that haunted me was brought out into the open and I was cleansed and reborn again. This I did with the help of a psychiatrist. Later I received help from my clergyman (a rabbi) and a social worker.

Let no one try to tell one who suffers from deep depressions that "it is all in her head." It is a very real. There is nothing imaginary about a mental illness. Denying it only prolongs the agony and delays the cure which comes from psychiatric treatment. So tell "NERVOUS AND AFRAID" that she must get help. She owes it to herself, her husband and her children.

Sincerely,
"BEEN THERE"

A JUNE wedding is planned

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Williams of Belvidere make announcement this morning of the engagement of their daughter, Kance Kay, to Richard A. Carr of Bridgeport, Conn., son of Mr. and Mrs. Griffin Carr of Poplar Bluff, Mo.

The wedding is planned for June. Miss Williams, who now is on the staff at the University of Nebraska Health Center, soon will enter the Omaha Methodist Hospital School of Nursing.

Mr. Carr now is temporarily associated with a Lincoln Insurance Co.

THE PARTY

go-round begins for Kathy Dworak

One of the popular brides-elect is Miss Kathy Dworak, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. T. J. Dworak, who has a June date for her marriage to Louis Burgher.

The first of what appears to be a long list of courtesies for the June bride-elect, was the dessert luncheon and miscellaneous shower for which Miss Sue Dort, Miss Margo Mowbray, Miss Sudie Holman and Mrs. Lee Wagner (Barbara Eager) were hostesses on Sunday at the Lincoln Country Club. The guest list included a group of Miss Dworak's former high school friends.

Dean Rusk Testimony 'A Threat'

... CHINESE SAY

Tokyo (AP)—Communist China accused Secretary of State Dean Rusk Sunday of threatening the Vietnamese and Chinese people with "a big war" in his testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington Friday. It said China is prepared to take up the challenge.

The New China News Agency, an official Peking service, called Rusk's testimony backing the administration's policy on Viet Nam "a declaration that U.S. imperialism... is determined to seize South Viet Nam by force."

The commentary on Rusk's testimony, which the agency carried in a broadcast from Peking, stopped short of saying Chinese troops would be sent into the Vietnamese war. It said only that the Chinese will fight if the war is extended to the China mainland.

The agency said: "According to Rusk, what the United States wants is very simple: it only requires the Vietnamese people to accept gladly the right of the Americans to dominate South Viet Nam."

"Won't Give Up"
"The Chinese people, on their part, have declared more than once that they will give all-out support to the Vietnamese in their struggle against the U.S. aggressors until their ultimate victory, whatever the cost may be."

"They are fully prepared to take up the challenge and fight to the end, if U.S. imperialism insists on carrying the war into their country."

Some China specialists in Asia have recently said they believe China now has a real fear that the United States may eventually carry the air war beyond North Viet Nam into China.

China claimed Rusk's refusal to state any limit on American military involvement in South Viet Nam was proof that the United States sought to dominate the nation. The report also accused him of invoking "brinkmanship."

"John Foster Dulles, who initiated 'brinkmanship' and specialized in cold war, is dead. The line of action he followed went bankrupt. Today the people of Asia and other continents have grown in political consciousness and strength," the agency commentary said.

"Quarrel" Cited
It added that Rusk "would be better advised to tackle first the sharp quarrel raging in U.S. ruling circles over the prospect of war before intimidating China..."

The report also ridiculed American hopes that "under U.S. pressure China would turn towards 'peaceful competition' as the Soviet revisionists have done, and give up supporting the revolutionary anti-U.S. struggle of the peoples."

"But an illusion is, after all, an illusion. It only reveals the utter helplessness of the U.S. policy-makers in face of the great Chinese people who hold aloft the banner of revolution..."

"Unfortunately for Rusk, he is too short-sighted. The Khrushchev revisionists may collaborate with the United States, India and Japan to build a 'containment' wall around China. But the people of Asia and the whole world want revolution and the great influence of China cannot be 'contained' by any force."

The report added that Rusk's testimony was a "new exposure of the U.S. peace fraud."

Saigon, Viet Nam (AP)—Prime Minister Nguyen Cao Ky shuffled part of his cabinet Sunday to give South Viet Nam a new forward thrust on both war and peace fronts. The action was a direct consequence of the Honolulu conference and increased American aid. Ky also established a new high court to deal with corruption and the black market. He told a news conference: 1—Political action teams are being trained to revive political parties. 2—A constitution will be ready in November of this year.

3—Popular elections will be held in 1967. "I will not be a candidate," the jet pilot head of the government asserted. "I do not like politics." He declared his regime and the United States are marching stride by stride "with absolutely the identical purpose" to free South Viet Nam of communist aggression, build a peaceful society and introduce social justice.

Any rumored disagreements between the two allies, Ky said, were refuted. The cabinet reshuffle uses the men already on the job and adds a few more to take on a variety of tasks. Special commissions have been created to deal with the refugees, with the Montagnard minority, to run the ports and harbors, and to concentrate on the supply problem.

A deputy minister for foreign affairs, an increasingly big department, is to be appointed. The special court is assigned to deal with any corruption, graft or speculation involving sums above 50,000 piastres. (There are 73 piastres to the dollar). Ky said ordinary legal procedures "take too long and this court will act in a matter of days when a case arises."

He indicated that a plan is afoot to give the capital of Saigon back to the Vietnamese by moving military installations "both Vietnamese and foreign" to the outskirts of the city.

As part of that cleanup campaign, he added that "we are going to do something about the bars and night clubs."

Elkhorn's Bruhn Service Named For Product Misrepresentation

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has charged two affiliated freezer locker meat processing and merchandising firms and their owners with misrepresenting the product they sell and with "bait and switch" advertising practices—in violation of the Packers and Stockyards Act.

Named in the complaint were: —Bruhn's Freezer Meats of Chicago, Inc., in business as Beefland Freezer Meats, Bristol, Wis., engaged in purchasing, preparing, and selling meat.

Police said that Lincraft Western Store, 650 West O, had been burglarized sometime Sunday morning or Saturday night.

The burglars made off with about $300 worth of merchandise and store property. Most expensive item taken was a typewriter valued at about $125.

Police said the burglars gained entrance by throwing a brick through the plate glass in the front door and then unlocking the door.

Elkhorn, Neb., which manages the business policies and practices of the Beefland firm and approximately 30 similar and affiliated firms located in cities throughout the United States.

The complaint was issued by the Packers and Stockyards Division of USDA's Consumer and Marketing Service. The firms and their owners will have an opportunity for a formal hearing on the charges.

After the hearing the USDA Judicial Officer will determine whether the evidence substantiates the charges.

The complaint charges that in five specific transactions the firms and their owners—through their Beefland outlet—sold consumers meat which was represented to be beef sides and hindquarters of a specific USDA grade.

The Beefland firm, the complaint charges, later delivered to the consumers packaged and processed meat prepared from beef forequarters, and from meat of a lower USDA grade or meat which had not been graded.

The complaint also charges that the firms and their owners on 35 separate dates advertised in six Illinois and Wisconsin newspapers offers to sell meat at their Beefland outlet at specific prices.

The offers were not genuine and bonafide, the complaint charges, in that they were made to attract potential customers, but then the firm's salesmen made no effort to sell the advertised meat, discouraged customers from buying it, and attempted to and usually did sell them higher-priced meat.

President Asks, Gets Beagle Name From Coco: 'Lady B'

Washington (AP)—Seven-year-old Courtney McPherson told President Johnson Sunday she has given the name "Lady B" to a female puppy he gave her.

Johnson, in turn, straightened out Courtney on the pup's politics. President and Mrs. Johnson stopped to talk with Courtney, whose nickname is "Coco," after attending 11 o'clock services at St. Mark's Episcopal Church on Capitol Hill.

Johnson asked Courtney what she had named the 4-month-old beagle, a daughter of "Him," the White House Beagle.

She told him "Lady B." Johnson then asked whether the Beagle is a Democrat or a Republican.

Johnson assured her that the puppy is a Democrat.

Janice Diggs, 10, a girl who attends St. Mark's and is a friend of Courtney, and "Coco" were invited to ride with the Johnsons to the White House. They unhesitatingly accepted.

Courtney, a favorite of the President, is the daughter of Harry C. McPherson Jr., a presidential assistant who soon is to become White House special counsel.

The rector of St. Mark's, the Rev. William M. Baxter, prayed for peace in the world and an end to hate and prejudice at home.

Concession Stand Butane Explosion Injures Eight

New Orleans (AP)—A butane gas tank in a carnival concession truck blew up Sunday and injured eight persons.

George G. Coe of Kansas City, Mo., owner of the truck, and his brother, Max Coe, 38, of Omaha, Neb., were burned seriously.

The other six, all parade spectators, were not seriously hurt.

Police said the explosion blew out some windows of the truck. Flames escaped into the crowd of spectators when Max Coe opened a truck door, police said.

Blaze Destroys Old Colony Club
Springfield, Mass. (AP)—Fire Sunday destroyed the exclusive Colony Club, a 20-room mansion built in 1890 for $1 million as the home of Daniel B. Wesson, an original owner of the Smith and Wesson Revolver Co.

The mansion was built of stone with an interior of carved woodwork and marble fireplaces. It was designed as a French chateau of the Louis XIV period.

Wesson deeded his home to the private club in 1915 to be preserved as a landmark.

Near zero temperatures made fire-fighting difficult and strong winds carried embers endangering nearby apartment houses.

The club apparently was not occupied at the time. Cause of the blaze was not immediately known.

"I'LL REMEDY THAT!"
"HELLO, BEAUTIFUL!"
"IDIOT! DON'T YOU KNOW BETTER THAN TO KISS ME WHEN I'M SEWING?"
"FATHER KISSED ME AND I THINK I SWALLOWED A PIN!"
"OH, DEAR! SHALL I CALL A DOCTOR?"
"NO--I DON'T THINK HE'S HURT THAT BADLY!"

DID YOU KNOW THIS? IT'S A FACT!
Japan ranks as the fourth-largest producer of four-wheel motor vehicles--after the United States, West Germany and Great Britain.
The total U.S. farm debt at the start of this year totaled $36 billion--45% more than five years ago. It is nearly 200% over the farm debt of 1950.
Japan's total working force is 46,90,000, up 520,000 in a year.
